

INT. NEWS DESK

PAMELA ADDRESSES THE CAMERA.

PAMELA

Hello -- I'm Pamela Stephenson, and I'm English. I came here from England to do the "Saturday Night" show, in fact. Now I like America, don't get me wrong, but I do feel a bit frustrated with American men. They have a fondness for -- well, be honest -- an absolute obsession about the female body.

PAMELA'S RIGHT BREAST BEGINS TO RISE. DURING THE FOLLOWING, BOTH BREASTS RISE, THEN FALL, THEN CIRCLE AROUND HER CHEST (UNKNOWING, SHE TIPS ACCORDINGLY).

PAMELA (CONT'D)

I find that men here are shockingly unabashed about staring at a woman's, well, breasts, and it's most disconcerting. They stare and point and even giggle sometimes, like little children. I'll be talking to some man, as I'm talking to you now, and he won't even make eye contact! I have to make ridiculous faces simply to get a man to look me in the eye!

(makes ridiculous face)

You see?

(MORE)

(CONTINUED)

CONTINUED:

PAMELA (CONT'D)

That's probably the first time most of the men watching tonight have seen my face! I'm sorry to be so critical but this really has been bothering me and I had to get it off my chest. Basically, all I have to say is this -- men of America... grow up...

LIGHTS BEGIN FLASHING ON HER BREASTS.

PAMELA (CONT'D)

Just grow up. Thank you.

THE END